

3. In the film, the war is a constant presence. In what ways does the director of the film introduce the topic of the war?

4. Often during the film, the character of Henri is shown as static while people in the background are in constant movement. How would you interpret this motif in the film?